Lead Hand Training

Are you a lead hand, team leader, journey person, shift leader, head cashier, or similar? Are you in a position that gives you a certain amount of 'supervisory' duties, yet you are a union brother or sister? Does management delegate their duties onto you? If so, it is important to understand your legal responsibilities under occupational health and safety law.

No matter what province or jurisdiction we work under - whether it is provincial or federal - we all have legal duties that we must abide by depending on your level of responsibility. You may have legal accountability under the Criminal Code of Canada!

This course is designed for our "Union" members who provide direction to other members in their workplace. This course will identify your responsibility within the law and the importance of due diligence. We will answer any questions of legal accountability and discuss strategies to effectively negotiate language in your collective agreement to strengthen our union.

Once you have phoned in your request, you'll be REGISTERED should your course be full or cancelled the National will contact you, otherwise PLEASE show up!

NO LOST TIME WILL BE PAID

Finding Your Voice – Public Speaking

Are you reluctant to speak up at membership meetings? Do you find it awkward to strike up a conversation with a co-worker about an issue of interest in your workplace? Do you wonder how others appear so able and comfortable to speak publicly? Would you like to be more familiar with the rules that determine when you can speak at a meeting or convention?

If the answer to any of these questions is yes, then this is the course for you. You will learn some of the "tricks & traps" of public speaking and respectful conversations. We will review speaking styles and acknowledge their value. Confidence grows throughout the day as participants take on opportunities to speak out in class.
